Sheridan hopes for plea deal

Decades-old case may soon be put to bed

BY JODI STYNER
Didsbury Review

An extradition warrant against Didsbury's Jack Sheridan, 69, has been lifted and he is expected to appear voluntarily in Florida next month to face charges nearly four decades old.

Sheridan, his lawyers and Florida authorities have all indicated a plea bargain may be on the way for the Didsbury Inn owner, but according to U.S. regulations, no details can be discussed at this time.

"It's something that shouldn't have been brought up again."

JACK SHERIDAN

"It's already determined pretty well," Sheridan told the Review Monday.

"The outcome will be in my favour."

Sheridan was arrested in June 2005 in a cold case he thought had been closed.

In February 1968, the car Sheridan was driving collided head-on with a Greyhound bus, killing his passenger Walter M. Jones and injuring 23 others.

It is believed Sheridan, who was also injured in the crash, was intoxicated at the time of the accident, of which he has no recollection.

He was convicted in 1968 of manslaughter by culpable negligence and manslaughter by intoxication, and sentenced to one year and two months in prison, but later won his appeal and the conviction was overturned.

Sheridan said the State of Florida then appealed his appeal and a new trial date was set for October 1971, but he was working on the pipeline in Borneo at the time and was never notified. After returning from Borneo, he moved to Didsbury and started his business, leading a successful and well-respected life for decades without incident.

He maintains that his move to Canada was not an effort to evade police.

"I didn't run away; I had no idea," he said.

"I was in Borneo when a new trial was set and they never contacted me."

It's been a year of frustration for Sheridan who vowed last year to fight the extradition.

"It's something that shouldn't have been brought up again," he said.

"I was granted an appeal and then two years later the state appealed my appeal in my absence."

If an August hearing is made official, Sheridan will likely have to appear in person, but nothing is confirmed.

"It hasn't been OK'd yet," said Sheridan, who wants to put the past behind him.

"It just keeps going," he said.

Since the case reopened, Jones' family members have had to rehash their pain again and have indicated they would like to put it to bed as well.

"What good is this going to do? This happened 30-some years ago," Jones' sister Cecile Herring told the Calgary Herald last week.

"I'm sure he (Sheridan) has gone through hell."

Didsbury Lawyer Brian Forstell, who represented Sheridan following his arrest in 2005, told the Review that Sheridan, now represented by a different lawyer, deserves to live a happy, peaceful life.

"No one has a bad word to say about Jack," he said.

"He is a respected and liked, gentle, good guy."

If a plea deal is made, Sheridan will likely be permitted to remain in Didsbury and continue running his business.

Nominate a business today

BY JODI STYNER
Didsbury Review

The third annual Small Business of the Year Awards are coming up soon and it's time to get your votes in.

When nominating a business, Scott Puttick, president of the Didsbury and District Chamber of Commerce, said the two most important factors for consideration, in his view, would be community involvement and progressive-ness.

But the nomination forms outline several criteria including operating success, innovation, community work and service performance.

Chamber secretary Kathleen Windsor said there are many deserving businesses in town, but the one that stands above the rest will likely be an owner who is a good employer and gets involved in the community.

"A business that has a low employment turnaround obviously reflects a good employer because the employees are not looking elsewhere," she said.

And a person who volunteers in the community and encourages their staff to get involved can make a big impression.

Last year's winner For Trees, volunteered its services by doing free landscaping at Westglen school.

Owner Gerard Fournier said it was something they could do to give back to a community that has given so much to them.

"We haven't been here a heck of a long time, just six years, but our business has grown beyond our wildest expectations since moving here and continues to grow," he said.

"We were honoured to be recognized by our peers."

Fournier is encouraging everyone to nominate a business they think is deserving of the award.

"It's nice to be nominated, that's for sure," he said.

The award will be presented at the Small business gala on Saturday, Oct. 28. Nominations must be in before Sept.

30 and are open to business owners and individuals.

Forms are now available at the Chamber office or can be downloaded from the Chamber Web site at www.didsburychamber.ca.

Call Kathleen Windsor with any questions (335-9445).

CHAMBER CHAT

It's that time of year again - time to get your tickets for Didsbury's "must attend" event of the year - the Chamber's Small Business Gala!

The Didsbury & District Chamber of Commerce joins the country in paying tribute to the significant contribution that small and medium-sized business owners make to our economy. Didsbury's Gala gives businesses and residents an opportunity to network with those interested in small business and dedicated to its development, and even more importantly, just to visit with each other.

The Chamber of Commerce Small Business Gala is a great event for Didsbury entrepreneurs, service organizations, and those in the community who just want to say "thank you" to our local businesses. What a great opportunity to take your staff out for an affordable evening of fun and socializing. Many people use the Small Business Gala as an opportunity for customer appreciation. Some bring their friends and family for a great night out on the town.

This year the Chamber is pleased to have ventriloquist Damien James as the evening's entertainer. Damien James has performed clean comedy at corporate and convention events all over Canada and has won many major awards for his excellence in performance.

In addition, the Chamber will be presenting the 2006 Small Business of the Year Award, and close the evening with a dance.

Everyone is encouraged to get their names on the waiting list for the 2006 Gala. Call Kathleen at 335-9445, Margo at 335-3307, or Val at 335-0064. The Gala is open to everyone in town, so mark your calendar and order your tickets today!

EDITORIAL & OPINION

Suck it up

As citizens of a civilized country, there are a number of things we all expect as basic rights.

And having become accustomed to the many benefits of a public health-care system, one of the rights we expect is that if, God forbid, we ever require blood, it will be there.

But how many of us feel a responsibility to give it?

Yes, as citizens of this great country, we are entitled to enjoy certain luxuries.

But the word 'citizen' implies a two-way relationship.

Not only should we receive services, we should be contributing to them as well.

This is as much a lecture to myself as it is to you, the reader, because (I'm ashamed to say) I have never donated blood myself.

I've come up with numerous excuses over the years.

There was a blood drive at my school when I was 15, but I was one pound under the weight requirement. I used that excuse for about five more years, even though I'd grown five inches and about 15 pounds.

I also have a common blood type, so maybe I figured there were enough people out there donating the same type and mine would just be extra.

But the fact is, only about four per cent of eligible Albertans donate blood and all types are needed.

And unfortunately the excuses available are endless, so we all keep passing the buck.

Now I have to wait to donate because I've travelled to areas where hepatitis levels are high.

But guilt has convinced me to feel an obligation as soon as that wait period is over, because my big brother wouldn't be alive today if somebody hadn't donated blood.

He was only five years old when he pulled out on his bike between two parked cars and was struck by a moving vehicle.

His spleen ruptured and he was bleeding heavily internally.

By the time we arrived at the Red Deer hospital, he was in a coma and nearly dead.

But because someone was willing to suck up a few minutes of pain, he lived.

Whatever your excuse, consider that one day it will very likely be you or someone you care about who needs blood.

Wouldn't it be great to feel that you did your part as a citizen to earn the right to demand it?

If you are eligible to donate, there's a perfect opportunity coming up with the blood donor clinic coming to Didsbury July 31 from 2-7 p.m. at the Memorial Complex.

And remember, if you donated during the last drive in May, you are eligible again.

YOUR LETTERS

First-rate newspaper

I just wanted to write a letter of congratulations to the new owners of the Didsbury Review, and our new editor, Jodi Styner. In the last month or two, our local newspaper has become the type of publication we deserve. Articles have real substance to them, the editorials are well-written, enjoyable, and even thought-provoking on occasion. The new layout is refreshing, and I love the colour.

It's obvious the editor is more than willing to attend any event going on because she seems to be everywhere, which isn't an easy task when you're virtually the only reporter in town. The latest supplement was a real treat, too; to see so many local businesses showcased certainly helped us all see what a diverse shopping selection Didsbury offers.

I'm not alone either. People are talking about articles they've read in the paper. "Did you see that article ..." or "It was in this week's paper ..." has been heard more than once. This is good news for business owners, because it's important to know the publication they place their ads in is actually being read.

A great community like Didsbury deserves a first-rate newspaper. It's nice to be able to say, "the Didsbury Review is it!"

PONDERINGS OF THE HEART Relationships

BY MARGARET FRADLEY
for the Review

Have we met people, or had to work side by side with some with whom we had very little in common, we simply did not march to the same drummer?

Have we had relationships with people who have hurt or betrayed us in some way?

How do we respond to these kinds of relationships? Do we tend to shy away from them; pretend they do not exist, or just ignore them and try to move on?

It has been my experience that when I meet these kinds of people, and do not deal with them in a healthy way, that the Lord has a way of continually bringing this type of person into my life, until I have learned to deal with them, learning not only to 'put up with them', but to come to accept them and bring about a relationship with them.

Meeting up with these kinds of situations and relationships can present a challenge to us. Instead of 'reacting' we can learn to 'act'; in place of remaining annoyed, hurt or frustrated, we can discover how best to develop, not necessarily a close intimate relationship, but a warm, relaxed and acceptable one.

Also, we can seek out, or wait for opportunities to arise when we can reach out, encourage or help the other person. It has been said we cannot hammer a relationship into being, but we can try the screw-driver method, a few good turns.

Have a good week!

Thompson throws hat into ring

Wild Rose MP announces his intention to seek Conservative nomination one more time

BY JON KOCH
Olds Albertan

Myron Thompson would like to stay on as Wild Rose MP just a little longer.

Thompson announced Friday he would be seeking the Conservative nomination in preparation for any upcoming federal election.

"It was sort of dropped on me and the answer without hesitation would be yes because we haven't even had a chance to think about it," said Thompson. "Our riding has to have a nomination meeting, and I had to make up my mind."

With a confidence vote looming over the softwood lumber deal with the United States, Conservative Party headquarters contacted all party incumbents and instructed them to have their ridings "prepared and ready to roll" in the event of a snap fall election.

Thompson doubts opposition to the deal will translate into support for a non-confidence motion.

"The Liberals are so far from ready and nobody really wants an election," said Thompson.

This doesn't mean, however, that the Sundre resident doesn't also have concerns of his own about the deal.

Specifically Thompson feels the provision for a purge in order to fight Mountain Pine beetle, and the 23-month opt-out clause for the US, need to be addressed.

"Those are the two that I'm constantly sending in messages to the negotiators that 'you better work hard to get those things fixed,'" said Thompson.

"Other people who don't know much about the industry think it's marvellous we've come to an agreement, without knowing the implications of it."

While Thompson's announcement is consistent with a promise he made following the Jan. 23 federal election to run again if an election was called within the following year, his decision may throw a wrench in the works for those who are looking to be the next Wild Rose Conservative MP.

Although encouraging potential successors to "hang tough," Thompson said he will take on all comers at the party's nomination meeting.

"I believe in the democratic process, if you want to go for it, that's (your) prerogative, and I'm ready to accept all challenges and I'm ready for the people to be the judge," said Thompson.

As for whether this will be the 13-year veteran's last run for Parliament, Thompson remained non-committal.

"I'm ready to shut 'er down, but I'm also ready to give 'er full gas," said Thompson.

"I've been in opposition for over 2,000 days, and in government for 75 days and ... the changes I've been fighting so hard for are starting to come into place and I want to see them through."

"I'll be like Yogi Berra, 'it's over when it's over.'"

Youth justice risks folding

BY JODI STYNER
Didsbury Review

Despite a $2,000 cash injection earlier this month, Gord Fulton, chair of Didsbury's youth justice committee, says the program is at risk of folding if the community doesn't step up to help.

Didsbury's program, started in 1997, is one of the oldest in Canada and while the demand is still there, the manpower isn't.

"We definitely need funding, but more importantly, we need volunteers or the program won't continue," said Fulton.

The committee currently has three members, including Fulton, and he's stepping down this year, so they'll be left with just two.

"It's sad for me because I really believe so much in the youth of this town," said Fulton.

But after 10 years on the committee, and eight acts of vandalism to his business, he's ready to pack it in.

"I've been targeted partly because I'm doing this and it's like a double slap in the face," he said.

"I think the kids in this town either love me or hate me."

He thinks some kids at that age don't have the maturity level to appreciate what youth justice is about, but that sometimes, down the road they realize it.

One young man stopped into his business last Christmas to thank him for his help.

"It's an honour for me to know him, to have crossed paths with him," Fulton said of the man.

"I really believe that we plant seeds and touch and affect people in some way. The choice is in whether it's in a positive or negative way."

The Youth Justice program sees 24 to 36 cases a year that vary in type from vandalism, vehicle break and enters to uttering threats.

It is an alternative to the mainstream judicial system and usually allows youth who have committed minor offences to avoid court.

Fulton said this is particularly important in youth cases.

"A judge just wants facts and figures, he doesn't care if a kid feels bad for what he did," he said.

"Usually duty counsel speaks for them and they may not get a chance to speak at all for themselves."

The program also involves victims of the crime, so the youth can better understand what effect their crime had on that person, and the punishment is meant to fit the crime.

But Fulton said people often mistake it as simple community service when it's really about community involvement and learning from mistakes.

"We develop a rapport and get them on a better path, and help them make changes in their lives," he said.

Fulton has attended court for kids, acted as an advocate in front of judges and gone beyond the support a kid might get from a lawyer.

"I've done things that have basically saved a lot of kids' butts," he said.

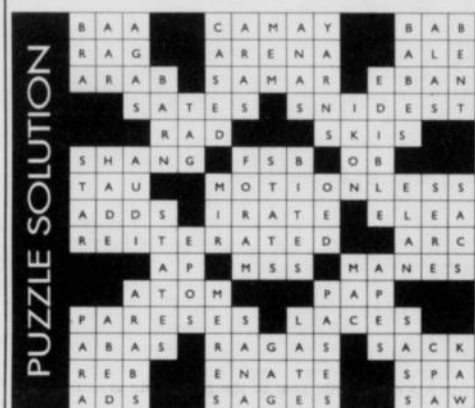

Now he and incoming chair Kim Milger are looking for volunteers, over the age of 17, who are interested in doing something with youth support and will get involved.

"If this program folds, it will be really sad because these kids will be losing a real opportunity."

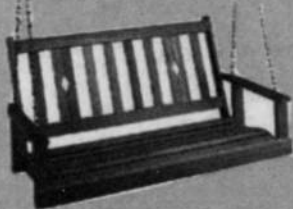

STEPPING DOWN - Gordon Fulton, Didsbury Youth Justice Committee chair, will be stepping down to focus more on his family and business.

THAT'S MY BOY — Harry Roberts cheers as his son Dusty explodes out of the shoot for his biggest bareback ride at the Calgary Stampede during Tuesday's performance.

Carla Victor/Didsbury Review

Didsbury cowboy turns passion into career

BY JODI STYNER
Didsbury Review

You might be hard pressed to find a kid who's willing to give away his TV, but for 15-year-old Dusty Roberts, it was more than just a medium for entertainment; it was a bargaining tool that would open up the door to his future career as a bareback rider.

"My uncle gave me a riggin' for a TV and that's pretty much how I started," the Didsbury native said.

Now 20, Roberts has just capped off a week of competing alongside the best-of-the-best at the Calgary Stampede in the Novice Bareback event.

For a young cowboy, the Stampede crowd can be a little intimidating, but Roberts handled it like a pro.

"It takes your breath away when you see everybody, but once you get on your horse and nod your head it's fine," he said.

"It's just like any other rodeo."

Despite his composure, the week didn't turn out in Roberts' favour.

He received a no score in both rounds, and took a bit of a beating his first ride out.

"I was drilled right into the ground," he said.

But it took skill and hard work just to get there and Roberts' rodeo future looks bright.

Like many rodeo kids, Roberts started out as a steer rider, so the natural progression was to move to the bull riding.

"I rode bulls for awhile," he said. "It was alright, but then I started sucking and I just started concentrating more on bareback riding."

Well known as the most physically demanding rodeo event, Roberts has learned first-hand where bareback received its reputation.

He's broken both of his arms and missed most of this season recovering from the most recent fracture, coming back just in time for Calgary.

But he hasn't let a few broken bones and scars deter him.

That fateful TV trade seems to have worked out in Roberts' favour.

He's already earned himself a novice Canadian Championship and an invite to the Calgary Stampede.

He also snagged himself a scholarship to a Texas college, but he hopes not to have to put a diploma to work.

"That's the goal, to ride and not have to work," he said.

Next season he'll make the jump to the open event, challenging the heroes he grew up watching from a heroic seat in the Stampede grandstand.

O'Neill sets new Stampede record

Champion horse and cowboy put on a show

BY JODI STYNER
Didsbury Review

In a love story with a twist, Didsbury's Glen O'Neill drew the pick of the pen last week to break a Calgary Stampede record in the saddlebronc competition.

Cool Alley started out as a bareback horse, leaping to fame as the 2001 horse of the year in that event.

O'Neill was impressed by her size and strength and approached contractor Duane Kesler to ask that the big brown mare be moved to the saddlebronc competition.

The move was granted and, ironically, O'Neill was the first cowboy to draw her at the Calgary Stampede where she put him in the dirt before the eight-second whistle.

Cool Alley could clearly hold her own, and is now two-time reigning world bucking horse of the year in her new event.

Proud owner, Duane Kesler, said a horse her size (1,400 lb.) usually doesn't work that hard because it takes too much effort, but she has a lot of heart.

Every time the gate cracks, Cool Alley does her job. If the cowboy does his, she'll take him to the pay window. If he doesn't, she'll send him home with empty pockets.

So when O'Neill learned what horse he'd drawn in the round to qualify for the $100,000 showdown he was pretty excited to be matched up with Cool Alley.

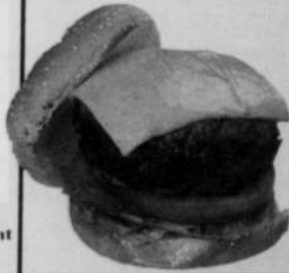

And what a match it was.

Both horse and rider gave 100 per cent and the result was a record 94.5 score, enough to win him top day money and a comfortable spot in the top 10 for Sunday's final round.

Unfortunately, O'Neill spurred himself off War Cry Sunday, but he still went home with $20,000 in prize money and a lot of love for Cool Alley.

On the road with Murray Snyder Time to get tough

I've now biked the 520 km from Whitehorse in five and a half days, plus a rest day. I'm going to spend a couple days here to rest and get ready for the next big push (more on that later).

In that 520 km there are exactly three towns plus a few campgrounds. It's a vast wilderness of hills, lakes, hills, big rivers, innumerable streams and more hills.

Just a ways out of Whitehorse you hang a right and leave the Alaska highway behind and head off north on the Klondike highway.

I was surprised to find that this area is quite a bit drier than Whitehorse...it's not sagebrush country, but the hillsides often have only sparse grass on them.

One day it was quite hot and a rain shower swept through—besides getting me soaked, it had two interesting effects: the drops were hitting the pavement and spattering up into the sunlight. First time I've ever seen a horizontal rainbow hovering just above the pavement. The other effect was the smell—yeah, the smell. The pavement was so warm and the air was intensely humid and smelled like, well, old wet socks!

Yesterday one of the incredible views was an overlook at the Tintina Trench. This is a geologic feature that is North America's largest fault extending several hundred miles across the Yukon and Alaska.

The vista is like something you see in a Yukon tourist commercial. I enjoyed it for about 10 minutes until an 18

RV caravan pulled in and the solitude was broken.

I've met some more neat cyclists: Nicolas from Manchester, England (next door to Didsbury, England) is riding to the southern tip of South America on a tandem. He's shooting a documentary on the people who fill in his empty seat, cycling the length of the Americas in search of company. That's a new twist!

I have major concerns about the next phase of my trip: 740 km of gravel road from Dawson Creek to Inuvik.

I've heard so many horror stories of cyclists who had to quit—usually for weather reasons. It's 369 km to the first outpost of civilization (Eagle Plains)—just 35 km south of the Arctic Circle. I'm trying to look at it in terms of 11 days of 70 km each. The first grocery store is in Ft. McPherson, some 550 km up the road. That's a lot of food to carry, especially when you're burning at least 5,000 calories a day.

I don't think I'll chicken out, but the closer I get to it the more daunting it becomes.

Ditch Detritus finds of the week: because of the sparse population, I'm finding less and less, but there was a bottle of mouthwash, a green feathered dart, a new 8' 2x10, a shattered bookcase, and a kitchen chair with one severely crippled leg.

I'm writing this at 11 p.m. and the sun is still shining.

Murray Snyder

West Nile virus remains a health concern for all Albertans. Those over the age of 50 are at greater risk of becoming seriously ill when infected with West Nile virus.

- Your best protection is insect repellent with DEET. Used as directed, DEET has an excellent safety record.
- Products with lemon eucalyptus oil are effective for shorter periods of time.
- Wear long-sleeved shirts and pants at dusk and dawn when mosquitoes are most active.

Didsbury Elk to become Grand Exalted Ruler

BY JODI STYNER
Didsbury Review

Didsbury Elk Bill Ward is set to become the honoured Grand Exalted Ruler, representing the order at a national level.

The installation of officers ceremony will be held in Calgary July 26 and the Didsbury Elks club is hoping to organize a bus trip so that members of the community can come out to support Ward.

During his 12-month term, Ward's role will be highly focused on public relations, involving a lot of travel.

His first big stint will be to embark on a three week trip across Canada, meeting with different lodges.

"It's a busy job and there are some demands on your time, not that it's not going to be enjoyable," he said. "I've talked to the last three fellows that have gone through and by the time you finish 12 months of total dedication the order, you're ready for some downtime."

Fellow Elk Don Neal, who is in line to take the provincial leadership position next year, said it's about time Ward got this opportunity.

"I believe that he'll serve in the same capacity as all of the guys do," he said. "Their heart and dedication is right into this stuff."

Ward has been an Elks member since 1976 and has been with the Didsbury order for 28 years.

One of his focuses this year will be to work with CASLPA (a Canadian speech and language pathology group) to make more scholarships available in the area of speech and hearing, keeping in line with the national focus.

"Our national focus has always been on children under the age of 19 and speech and hearing has been the focus of a lot of our efforts," said Ward. "There's provincial involvement in virtually every province too."

The Elks Fund For Children, which turns 50 years old this year, began out of a small initiative by one man.

"The fellow got involved in Saskatchewan with speech and hearing and got researching and discovered that the average age of diagnosing a hearing loss in an infant was about 2 years and he said 'that's not good enough,'" said Ward. "He came to a national convention, sold the delegates on the idea that we should get involved in this and now, 50 years later, we're still involved"

The Elks have received national awards for the Fund's work, but it isn't the only thing they're involved in.

They're involved in a gamut of community initiatives helping everyone from children to seniors.

Here in Didsbury, their work can be seen all over town, from parks, and sports fields, to the lacrosse team's uniforms.

Over the last year, the Didsbury Elks have provided emergency funding to two families devastated by fire.

"If a family loses their house and all of their possessions, there are funds available immediately through a phone call to get clothing, shelter and stuff for that family," said Ward.

Nationally, the Elks provide well over $6 million annually and in Alberta that amount tops $1 million.

Funding dollars come from local fundraising activities, like raffles, bingos, suppers, dances, and casinos putting dollars back into the community.

Groups looking for funding simply need to write a letter or approach one of Didsbury's 80 members for information.

Everyone is invited to attend the installation of officers on July 26th.

Details are still being worked out, but the bus will leave in the morning and return by about supper time.

For more information, call Don Neal at 335-4676.

Concrete

THERE'S NO ALTERNATIVE TO CONCRETE

Concrete is the basement building material with all the advantages.

It's a proven performer, Rugged Tough, Durable. A concrete basement will never burn or rot.

And concrete is safe. Quality controlled, concrete needs no toxic chemicals which may be hazardous to building occupants.

Concrete is an energy-wise choice. A concrete basement needs little heat or air conditioning. And concrete walls are easily insulated.

Economically, concrete is a good investment. A concrete basement will add years of life to the foundation and considerable dollars to the resale value of your building.

Add up the advantages. There's simply no alternative to quality

175 MEMORIAL

In loving memory of Gloria Snyder who passed away July 21, 2000.

There will be this heartache and often the silent tears,
We shall cherish those precious memories of the days when you were here.
We hold you close within our hearts, And there you will remain,
Please walk with us throughout our lives, Until we meet again.
Remembering you is easy, we do it every day,
But missing you is a heartache that never goes away.
Always remembered and sadly missed by Charlie & families.

230 THANK YOU

The family of Margaret Hemming would like to thank the LPN's, Care Aides, Kitchen Staff, Home Care Nurses of ASPEN RIDGE LODGE for their care and compassion during Margaret's final days. Many thanks as well to Companion Caring #4U and the Palliative Care Staff of Didsbury Hospital. Your kindness will never be forgotten.

Barbara, Jackie, Susan and Bryon
